

Happy February!

What a great month where we get to focus on our loved ones and celebrate American Heart Month and Black History Month. I always love for our former EWI Chapter member, Meredith Ford O'Neal, with the John Ritter Foundation for Aortic Health, to come and share her story. It is SO important for women to listen to their bodies and take care of themselves. It saved Meredith and her son's life. We often are so busy taking care of everyone else that we sometimes forget to take care of ourselves.

I also love that in February there is also a week of Random Acts of Kindness. I love that we have an opportunity to show our friends, family and strangers some kindness. A random act of kindness is a non-premeditated, inconsistent action designed to offer kindness towards the outside world. I challenge you to end your February with a random act of kindness to a complete stranger.

Thank you to each and every one of you in our chapter for creating such a wonderful community of women and welcoming our newest members into this community.

Dream, Dare and Deliver!
Jennifer

February

Great February meeting hosted by Neuberger Berman! Loved having Meredith Ford O'Neal from The John Ritter Foundation For Aortic Health speak to us about women's heart health for American Heart month!!!

Twenty years of honoring John's legacy with genetic research, widespread education, and radical advocacy.

We exist to spread awareness of aortic health and prevent unnecessary suffering through genetic research, widespread education, and radical advocacy. Every year, undiagnosed and misdiagnosed aortic dissections are responsible for a staggering number of tragically avoidable deaths. Since losing John, I've devoted myself to shining a much-needed light on thoracic aortic disease. Through genetic research, widespread education, and radical advocacy, The John Ritter Foundation and I are committed to alleviating this unnecessary suffering caused by the devastating lack of aortic awareness.

—Amy Yasbeck

Mental Health and Aortic Disease Research

Genetic counselors Gretchen MacCarrick and Jennifer Rios discuss their progress in creating a peer-reviewed resource that can first fill the gap of having a tangible resource to help patients feel validated in their feelings, avoid feelings of isolation, and to help them access mental health support if they need it.

Ritter Rules

The Ritter Rules were created to educate how to recognize, treat and prevent thoracic aortic dissection. Read the rules. Save a life.

Urgency

Thoracic aortic dissection is a medical emergency. The death rate increases 1% every hour the diagnosis and surgical repair are delayed.

Pain

Severe pain is the #1 symptom. Seek immediate emergency medical care for a sudden onset of severe pain in the chest, stomach, back or neck. The pain is likely to be sharp, tearing, ripping, moving or so unlike any pain you have ever had that you feel something is very wrong.

Misdiagnosis

Aortic dissection can mimic heart attack. Heart attacks are far more common than aortic dissection. But if a heart attack or other important diagnosis is not clearly and quickly established, then aortic dissection should be quickly considered and ruled out, particularly if a patient has a family history or features of a genetic syndrome that predisposes the patient to an aortic aneurysm or dissection.

Imaging

Get the right scan to rule out aortic dissection. Only three types of imaging studies can identify aortic aneurysms and dissections: CT, MRI and transesophageal echocardiogram. A chest X-ray or EKG cannot rule out aortic dissection.

Risk Factors

Aortic dissections are often preceded by an enlargement of the first part of the aorta where it comes out of the heart, called an aortic aneurysm. If you have an aneurysm, you are at increased risk for an aortic dissection. A personal or family history of thoracic disease puts you at risk. If you or a family member is living with an aneurysm or if you have a family member who has had an aortic dissection, you are at an increased risk for thoracic aortic dissection. You and your other family members should be evaluated to determine if a predisposition for aortic aneurysm and dissection is running in the family. Certain genetic syndromes put you at risk. These genetic syndromes greatly increase your risk for thoracic aortic disease and a potentially fatal aortic dissection: Marfan syndrome, Loeys-Dietz syndrome, Turner syndrome and Vascular Ehlers-Danlos syndrome. Bicuspid aortic valve disease puts you at risk. If you have a bicuspid aortic valve (two leaflets instead of the typical three), or have had a bicuspid aortic valve replaced, you need to be monitored for thoracic aortic disease.

Triggers

Lifestyle and trauma can trigger aortic dissection. It is possible to trigger an aortic dissection through injury to the chest, extreme straining associated with body building, illicit drug use, poorly controlled high blood pressure or by discontinuing necessary blood pressure medications. Rarely, pregnancy can trigger an aortic dissection. However, women with aortic aneurysms and connective tissue disorders who are pregnant are at higher risk of aortic dissection during late pregnancy and delivery and should be carefully monitored by a cardiovascular specialist.

Prevention

Medical management is essential to preventing aortic dissection. If you have thoracic aortic disease, medical management that includes optimal blood pressure control, aortic imaging and genetic counseling is strongly recommended. Talk with your provider.

7 Unforgettable Stories for Black History Month

Meet some of the artists, archivists, students, and descendants rediscovering and preserving the past.

BY APRIL WHITE • FEBRUARY 22, 2023

IN THE ATLAS OBSCURA ARCHIVES you'll find hundreds and hundreds of stories of Black history—unforgettable tales of resistance, inspiration, ingenuity, and joy. But as we celebrate Black History Month 2023, we don't want to overlook the people rediscovering and preserving this vital history, from the researcher who unearthed a missing moment in film history to the descendant documenting the legacy of Oregon's Black loggers and the foundation keeping Zora Neale Hurston's memory alive in a small Florida city.

By Line Sidonie Talla Mafotsing, Atlas Obscura editorial fellow

WHILE LOOKING THROUGH A BOX of unidentified film reels in 2017, Dino Everett, a film archivist from the University of Southern California, did not expect to unfurl a section of film showing a Black couple dressed in costumes typical of minstrel shows locked in a romantic embrace. The short, only 20 seconds long, showed the pair kissing, swaying, kissing again and just smiling at each other. Everett had rediscovered a lost moment in film history: William N. Selig's 1898 short film Something Good-Negro Kiss, the earliest known depiction of black intimacy on screen.

When Jerri Bell first wrote about the Golden Fourteen, their story only took up a sentence. These 14 Black women were the first to serve in the U.S. Navy, and Bell, a former naval officer and historian with the Veterans Writing Project, included them in a book about women's contributions in every American war. But even after the book was published, Bell couldn't get their story out of her head. Now she's writing another book detailing the lives of the Fourteen who somehow found employment in the muster roll unit of the U.S. Navy in Washington DC during World War I.

The Smithsonian American Art Museum recently acquired a 283-piece collection of their work and that of other Black artists from the mid 1800s, which includes one-of-a-kind images of abolitionists and early examples of photographic jewelry.

Keeping the Memory of Zora Neale Hurston Alive in a Small Florida City

By Tunika Onnekikami

As far as Marjorie Harrell knew, her sophomore English teacher in 1958 was just an old woman—quiet, tired, a bit sick. It was only after the teacher died a couple of years later that Harrell learned that she had been one of the most unique, critical figures in Black literature and culture during the 20th century. Harrell, a historian who grew up and still lives in Fort Pierce, Florida, a small coastal city halfway between Miami and Daytona Beach, realized years later that her teacher was Zora Neale Hurston, the world-renowned author of Their Eyes Were Watching God—a 1937 novel considered a classic of both the Harlem Renaissance and the American South. For Harrell, that belated realization was a spark that led to the Zora Neale Hurston Dust Tracks Heritage Trail.

Bowman-Hicks, the Missouri company that owned the town, like other lumber companies in the area, recruited skilled loggers from the South, regardless of race. Were Black GIs Killed in a World War II–Era Race Riot?

By Benoît Morenne

In the aftermath of a 1942 race riot in Alexandria, Louisiana, the U.S. military reported that 33 Black servicemen had been injured and none had been killed in an altercation with predominantly the white military police force. Podcast: Women of the Black Panther Mural

By the Podcast Team

In the days after the Black Lives Matter protests following George Floyd’s murder in the summer of 2020, Jilchristina Vest watched murals bloom on the plywood fortifications in her West Oakland neighborhood. They were beautiful images of tragedy, each a tribute to a Black person who had died at the hands of law enforcement. Those memorials inspired Vest to commission a different kind of mural on the side of her home. INTERNATIONAL WOMEN'S DAY MARCH 8, 2023

Worldwide, everyone everywhere can step forward to truly #EmbraceEquity

International Women's Day 2023 campaign theme: #EmbraceEquity

For International Women's Day and beyond, let's all fully #EmbraceEquity.

Equity isn't just a nice-to-have, it's a must-have.

A focus on gender equity needs to be part of every society's DNA.

And it's critical to understand the difference between equity and equality.

The IWD 2023 campaign theme drives worldwide understanding why Equal opportunities aren't enough!

Read more about this here.

So give equity a huge embrace

We can all truly embrace equity.

It's not just something we say. It's not just something we write about.

It's something we need to think about, know, value and embrace.

It's what we believe in, unconditionally. Equity means creating an inclusive world.

And we can all play a part

Each one of us can actively support and embrace equity within our own sphere of influence.

We can all challenge gender stereotypes, call out discrimination, draw attention to bias, and seek out inclusion.

Collective activism is what drives change. From grassroots action to wide-scale momentum, we can all embrace equity.

Forging gender equity isn't limited to women solely fighting the good fight. Allies are incredibly important for the social, economic, cultural, and political advancement of women.

International Women's Day

La Festa della Donna

Every year, Italy comes aglow with the golden blossoms of mimosas. On March 8, the fragrant flowers are presented to women across the country in celebration of La Festa della Donna, International Women's Day.

While more cultural in Italy today, the holiday's roots are political. The first observance, organized by the Socialist Party of America, was held in New York City in 1909 to protest a tragic event. Earlier in March, women at a garment factory in Manhattan had threatened to go on strike to protest dangerous working conditions, too many hours, and too little pay.

Just days later, the factory suspiciously burned to the ground – with 145 workers, mostly young women, trapped inside. Many consider the subsequent outrage as the catalyst of the women's movement; it was certainly the spark for International Women's Day.

Over the following decades, International Women's Day was adopted across the world. There was a steady rise in women-led strikes, marches, and other protests for equal rights in the United States, Europe, Asia, and Africa.

Finally, in 1977, the United Nations officially declared International Women's Day. Every year, there is a different official theme: 2017 is "Be Bold for Change." While the United States hasn't officially observed the day in the past, President Obama declared March to be Women's History Month in 2011; this year, we will see strikes across the country on March 8.*
